

Michael Jordan, who grew up in Wilmington, North Carolina, close to where Florence came ashore as a Category 1 hurricane, has donated $2 million to relief and recovery agencies. "It's truly devastating for me to see the damage that Hurricane Florence is doing to my beloved home state of North Carolina and to the surrounding areas," Jordan, who is the owner of the Charlotte Bobcats of the NBA, said last week in a statement posted on the team's website announcing its charity work.

Kipchoge's split times left many viewers scratching their heads as they tried to work out just how fast the race was won. The Kenyan was led out from the start by three pacemakers and he clocked the first 10 kilometers in world record pace. Shortly after the halfway mark, all three pacemakers dropped out, leaving Kipchoge to run the final 10 miles alone. But where most athletes would struggle, Kipchoge continued to defy the odds and instead of falling off the pace, he actually sped up.

Prince William went on rhino spotting trip in Namibia to learn more about conservation and the illegal wildlife trade in Africa. The Duke of Cambridge went rhino spotting with a team of local rangers on a 5am trek in the country's mountainous region, Kensington Palace said in a tweet. He praised the "beauty and sheer remoteness" of Namibia's landscape as he spotted a rare black rhino after five hours. The Duke of Cambridge said he was humbled by the rangers dedication towards protecting Namibia's rhinos population from poachers.

"Q" words are always tough, especially those without a "u" in them. Players can monetize with the word qapik, which is a unit of currency in Azerbaijan. The updated version of the players dictionary continues to follow some of the game's most important rules. Words must still come from the standard dictionary. No abbreviations, capitalized words or words with punctuation are allowed.

Every week seems to bring new confirmation we've officially entered the era of too much tourism. There's been sand pilfering in Sardinia and Venice visitors threatened with fines for sitting down. Over in Rome, there's been selfie-based violence and illegal bathing. In Madrid, stringent rules have been put in place to handle Airbnb as locals fear being priced out of the city.

FIFA has suspended Sierra Leone from world football over claims of government interference. The suspension comes after FIFA sent a letter to the country's Minister of Sports expressing "grave concern" about the removal of the football association president, Isha Johansen and the association's General Secretary, Christopher Kamara.

But a study released this week found that the Brazilian bird is now extinct in the wild. The Spix's macaw is one of eight bird species, half of them in Brazil, confirmed extinct or suspected extinct in the report from BirdLife International. Deforestation is a leading cause of the Spix's macaw's disappearance from its natural habitat, according to the report. For the first time, extinctions on the mainland are outpacing those on islands, the study says.

Trump struck an optimistic tone while speaking to reporters on the South Lawn of the White House just hours after Moon and Kim announced that North Korea would close a key missile test facility in the presence of "international experts" and potentially destroy a key nuclear complex if the United States agrees to corresponding measures.

Russia's Defense Ministry has said the system would be transferred to Syria in the next two weeks. The ministry said that Israel was "solely" to blame for bringing down the IL-20 aircraft last week. The plane was inadvertently shot down by Syrian forces during an Israeli airstrike in the Syrian coastal province of Latakia. Russia's military accused Israel of maneuvering its aircraft to use a Russian plane "as cover," putting it in the line of fire of Syria's anti-aircraft system.

In other words, the ankle, turned 180 degrees, functions as the new knee. Her ankle sits in the location of where her knee would be, since her lower leg was reattached to her thighbone. Doctors say they keep the foot because the toes provide important sensory feedback to the brain. Delaney's father, Noah Unger, said he was told that by having a natural joint at the knee, instead of a prosthetic joint, Delaney would be able to do "the leaps, the jumps, the hops" that dancing requires.

Some of this automation is wrapped around architectures and ideas that are emerging from the labs into general use. Programmers working on artificial intelligence used to write the code in their favorite language. Now some libraries, like TensorFlow, are stable enough to be widely deployed and their API acts almost like a language unto itself.

Overtourism might be the real deal, but it's also a broad term and it manifests itself differently in different destinations. In Paris, it might look like crowds of visitors jostling for a photo or glimpse of the "Mona Lisa" at the Louvre, says Miginiac, who presented at the World Tourism Day about overtourism at Machu Picchu.

Using a network of eight ground-based telescopes across the world, the EHT collected data to produce the image. The black hole itself is unseeable, as it's impossible for light to escape from it; what we can see is its event horizon. The EHT was also observing a black hole located at the centre of the Milky Way, but was unable to produce an image. While Messier 87 is further away, it was easier to observe, due to its larger size. The golden ring is the event horizon, the moment an object approaching a black hole reaches a point of no return, unable to escape its gravitational pull.

Yehliu Geopark in Wanli District, New Taipei City, will have a very different look at night in April as the park's trademark Queen's Head and other spectacular rock formations will be illuminated by light shows, with a concert taking place on the magnificent seashore. Those taking part in the Yehliu Night Tours will visit Queen's Head, Cute Princess Rock, and other interesting rock formations, and walk around Linying Lake, all of which will be illuminated, the North Coast and Guanyinshan National Scenic Area Administration said on Monday.
